EAST MIDLANDS

REGIONAL DATA REPORT

This report sets out the data from which the material quoted in Heritage Counts 2008 East Midlands (pictured below) is derived.

For ease of reference, text from the regional report is quoted in italics, followed by a selection of relevant datasets.

For further information on the national data, please refer to the national report Heritage Counts 2008.

Listed buildings: Between 2002 and 2008 the number of listed buildings in the East Midlands rose very slightly by 0.6% from 29,401 to 29,581. The region has 7.9% of England's Listed Buildings. Grade I listed buildings are well represented in the East Midlands; the region has 10.7% of England's total. The number of applications for Listed Building Consent determined in 2007/08 was 2,280, a slight fall on the previous three years.

Scheduled monuments: There are 1,512 Scheduled Monuments in the region, 7.7% of the national total. In 2007/08 the Department for Culture Media and Sport determined 61 applications for Scheduled Monument Consent.

Registered landscapes: There are 135 Registered Parks and Gardens in the region, 8 more than in 2002. The number of planning applications received for consultation by the Garden History Society was 68 in 2007/08, higher than any of the previous four years.

Registered battlefields: There are 5 registered battlefields in the region.

World Heritage Site: The region has one of England's 17 World Heritage Sites - Derwent Valley Mills in Derbyshire.

Number of assets per local authority area

Figures for the number of assets in each local planning authority area are given in the following tables, followed by data on the number of planning applications, listed building consents and conservation area consents in 2007/08.

All the region's local planning authorities are district / borough councils, except for Derby, Leicester, Nottingham and Rutland which are unitary authorities.

Historic landscape characterisation

Source: English Heritage

Historic Landscape Characterisation

Characterisation is a tool for describing the historic character of places as they are today and how past changes have shaped their present-day appearance. In 2008 56% of the land area of the East Midlands is mapped, compared with 36% in 2002. Studies have been completed in Derby and Derbyshire, Northamptonshire, Nottinghamshire and Rutland, and another is soon expected to be complete in Leicestershire. A similar project is now also underway for Lincolnshire and the city of Leicester.

English Heritage grants

In 2007/08 regional grant expenditure by English Heritage was £2,388,000. This represents a slight fall from spend in the two previous years, but allowing for inflation is similar to expenditure in 2001/02.

Grants offered by Heritage Lottery Fund

Source: Heritage Lottery Fund

Heritage Lottery Fund

Between 1993/94 and 2007/08 the East Midlands attracted 5.2% of the Heritage Lottery Fund's spending across the United Kingdom. A total of £215,536,000 was awarded in 2,735 awards, of which £95,930,732 was for historic buildings and monuments. Awards per capita were the second lowest of the English regions.

The figures above refer to all grants in the East Midlands since the inception of the Heritage Lottery Fund in 1993/94. The national publication of Heritage Counts, and other regional reports, quote figures supplied by HLF for 1994/95 onwards. It is these figures which are provided below for the sake of comparison.

Craft skills

Source: National Heritage Training Group

Craft skills

In 2008 the National Heritage Training Group (NHTG) reported concerns about the shortage of skills in the craft sector. It found that 32% of contractors contacted had outstanding vacancies. Although the sample was small, skill shortages appear to have eased since a previous report in 2005. However it is widely recognised that the region needs more coherent provision of training and action is now being planned with training providers, funders and owners.

A comparison of findings between the NHTG reports of 2005 and 2008 is set out below. Please note that owing to the small sample sizes and differences in methodology, caution is needed in drawing statistical conclusions.

Adult attendance at heritage sites in the last 12 months

Source: DCMS (Taking Part survey)

Participation and attitudes

In the first two years of the Taking Part survey (undertaken from July 2005), 71.5% of adults in the region had visited a heritage site in the last 12 months, marginally above the national average.

	East Midlands	CI	England	CI
Year 1	71.7	69.7-73.8	69.9	69.1-70.6
Year 2	71.3	68.9-73.7	69.3	68.3-70.3
Year 1 & Year 2	71.5	70.0-73.1	69.6	69.1-70.1

Note: The Taking Part survey is a sample survey. Each figure quoted is an estimate which is subject to sampling error and thus has a statistical confidence interval attached to it. The results above include the range that is suggested by the 95% confidence interval (CI). So when it is reported that 71.7% of all adults attended a designated historic environment site during the past 12 months, what this actually means is that we can be 95% confident that somewhere between 69.7% and 73.8% of all adults attended.

Among people from black or minority ethnic backgrounds, and people with a disability or from lower socio-economic groups, those living in the East Midlands were slightly more likely to attend historic sites than average.

The following figures are for Years 1 and 2 combined of the Taking Part survey.

	East Midlands	England
