HERITAGE PROTECTION REVIEW

© English Heritage

This autumn the government will launch its long-awaited White Paper on the protection of England's historic environment. In advance of legislative reform, English Heritage and its partners have been testing new streamlined approaches for designating and managing complex historic assets in public and private ownership.

As striking from the air as they are from the ground, the Grade II* ziggurats at the University of East Anglia are currently undergoing a major refurbishment predicated on guidance in the university's new Conservation Development Strategy.
