Directions

- 1 The trail starts near the Norman castle. Follow the footpath waymarked Nar Valley Way until you reach a pond.
- 2 Turn left and walk through the kissing gate along the waymarked trail. Head southwest towards the small village of South Acre, keeping the River Nar to your left and crossing it by a ford. At this point, there is an excellent view of the ruins of the Cluniac priory just to the north.
- 3 Follow the waymarking through a wood and on until you crest a hill at a crossroads. The trail leads through a couple more crossroads on to an ancient drove road that was used in Roman times, passing Bartholomew's Hills Plantation on your right.
- 4 This next section is waymarked as the Peddars Way. From South Acre, the route passes the village's church and South Acre Hall before following tracks through pastoral farmland above the Knar valley to arrive just east of West Acre.
- 5 At West Acre the route heads east along the Nar Valley Way back towards the village of Castle Acre. It passes through Castle Acre Common, designated an Site of Special Scientific Interest.
- 6 Beyond Castle Acre Common, the route passes north of the entrance to the Cluniac priory just before entering Castle Acre village. Then, after skirting 12th-century St James' Church, the track peters out into a grassy path that skirts the 13th-century stone Bailey Gate.
- 7 Turn left and walk along the lane, past the old castle gate, to the village green for refreshments in the village.
